Online dating is by far the most popular way to meet someone and Valentine's Day is a busy time of year for both new and experienced daters. However, this means that it's also a very busy time for cybercriminals, posing as suitors to steal people's money or identity, or both.

That's why the Economic Crime Unit of North Wales Police, North Wales Police and Crime Commissioner, Andy Dunbobbin and the North Wales Victim Help centre are running a public awareness campaign with Get Safe Online to provide tips and advice for residents on dating safely online.
